

EXTRA.
FITZ A HERO.

Jack Dempsey's Conqueror Owns the Sports To-Day.
HE'S A FIGHTING WONDER.

May Be Matched Against Some Heavy-Weight.

Myer and McAuliffe to Battle for Light-Weight Honors.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)
NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 15.—It is the old story: "The king is dead; long live the king!"

Jack Dempsey.

Fitzsimmons is the hero of the day here, and universally recognized as the best middle-weight fighter who has been seen in the prize ring for years. He is a good two-hander, hitting heavy blows, a scientific fighter with plenty of wind and an extraordinary reach.

Fitzsimmons is all right this morning and shows no trace whatever of the fight. Indeed, he left the ring last night almost as fresh as he entered it. He was ousted in the eighth round, but this was the only sign of the skinned, and his ribs were not even discolored, although he received several blows on them.

Dempsey is less pleased than was thought last night. However, his nose is broken, his left eye is closed, his face is generally swollen and he is badly scratched or bruised about the neck, shoulders and ribs.

He will be all right, except for his nose and eye, in a couple of days.

Dempsey is a great deal out of his fight. "I can't fight a giant," was the only thing he would say about the battle.

Fitzsimmons considers that Dempsey was clearly whipped in the tenth round, and thought he had won the fight.

He praises Dempsey's pluck, and thought that there were few men in the ring who would have stood up so long as he.

Fitzsimmons pronounced a wonder, clearly beyond any middle-weight in this country. He will be matched with Ted Fitzpatrick, of England, or possibly with a heavy-weight like Corbett.

Some $100,000 changed hands last night's fight. The victors nearly all lost heavily, while most of the money was captured by the local sports who backed Fitzsimmons.

The Olympic Club made a good thing of the fight and will probably net $10,000 to $15,000 on it. About 3,000 persons witnessed it.

About as Dempsey's nose is all right, he will leave for San Francisco. Fitzsimmons will spend a couple of weeks resting at Bay St. Louis, where he traded with Carroll. After this rest he will look around for other engagements. He made between $15,000 and $20,000 on the fight, including his bets.

Jimmy Carroll is in high feather over his recent victory, but that doesn't lead him into looking any more aggressively on the matter of fighting Jack McAuliffe.

While the improbability of these two light-weights being matched is something of a disappointment to sporting men, it is counterbalanced by the fact that an agreement is made for a fight between McAuliffe and Billy Myer, the Greater Cyclone, for $5,000 and the light-weight championship.

This will be a great contest, and fortunate will be the club which bids high enough to take it.

The papers will be signed next week. The fight will occur in April.

Last night's battle began at 8.30. In detail, by rounds, it was roughly as follows:

First Round—Fitzsimmons at once began to force the fighting. He broke ground in a second and then rushed. He landed right on Dempsey's neck, got away, and a second later hit right and left on Dempsey's face. Fitzsimmons rushed again and Dempsey got to a clinch. He clinched twice more on Fitzsimmons' head, and finally got the big fellow on the ropes in his own corner and pounded him three good ones.

He began by landing with his left. Dempsey knocked and got away. Again Fitzsimmons tried, but failed. A moment later they got together, and then Fitzsimmons hit Dempsey an awful snub in the face and knocked him down. The crowd was loud cheering. Dempsey got up, but was groggy. He fought wild at first, but during the rest of the round did nothing but keep away. Fitz could not catch him, although following him closely. The round was all Fitzsimmons'.

Fourth Round.—Both were good-natured to be able to hit his man as often as he chose, but his blows were not heavy. He sent his right to Jack's face and got away from a heavy swing. He then turned and got in a good one on Jack's nose. Dempsey got in two good blows, one on the neck with his right and one on the wind.

Fifth Round—Fitz came right out for business. He got home on Dempsey's neck with a hard one. He followed it a moment later with another in the same place. Dempsey kept away, and in a good rally sent two hot shots on Fitz's stomach. In a rush Dempsey fell to his knees, but clinched. Dempsey played for wind. The round was all in favor of Fitzsimmons. Dempsey closed the round with a hard one right in Fitz's stomach.

Sixth Round.—Fitz forced things again, and Jack ducked several blows easily. Then the latter cast of the round, and had a decided advantage. He rushed Jack to the ropes and battered away at him viciously.

Seventh Round.—Dempsey showed the effects of the last round. Fitzsimmons saw his advantage and rushed him. He sent right and left and Jack went down to his knees. Then they got to a clinch and Fitzsimmons hit him while they were together. Cries of "Foul" went up. It was a foul blow and hurt Dempsey. He fell on the ropes and it looked as if he was "out." He rallied and hit Fitzsimmons in the neck. Dempsey's followers began to think their money was gone up. Fitzsimmons looked smiling and confident, and he closed the round with two left-handers on Dempsey's stomach.

Eighth Round.—Jack looked tired as he squared off. He made a wicked swing at Fitz, but missed. Then the latter cast of the round, and the long one put on a scowl as he made a rush at his man. He stood still while Jack adjusted his glove, and then forced him to the ropes, hitting him as often as he chose. Jack's cleverness saved him many a hard blow. Fitz kept following up his advance and Jack kept away. A tremendous right-hand body blow by Fitz closed the round.

Ninth Round.—Dempsey was in bad condition. His left eye looked bad. Fitzsimmons never let up. He rushed all the way through. Dempsey did little more than clinch, on different occasions. Fitz hit him in the stomach while they were together. Cries of "Foul" from every side. Fitzsimmons then drove Dempsey all over the ring. He was bleeding from nose and mouth and was groggy on his pins and it looked as if he could not last the round.

Tenth Round.—Fitzsimmons walked over and looked as though he meant to finish his man. He landed a heavy right swinger on Jack's neck. Jack did not seem to be able to reach him. Fitz planted both hands in Jack's wind in succession. Jack ran around and clinched to his man to save himself. He was plainly outclassed. He was surely going, but he was game and made a grand rally. A right swing sent him down. He lay there for six seconds. Then Fitz waited for a chance and gave Jack a hard one on the jaw again.

Eleventh Round.—A great many people thought it was as good as over and left the building. Fitz came out and asked Dempsey to quit. Jack refused. Fitzsimmons did not like to hit him. He kept on, but when he had a chance to finish him let up a moment. He did a snub on Jack's head, but then he met Jack on the jaw and he staggered forward and fell face downward. Again he crawled to his feet Fitz gave him time to get on his feet and then hit him right and left. He fell in his corner and Fitzsimmons thought he had the fight won. He turned and went to his corner. Dempsey got to his feet and was stunned.

Twelfth Round—Fitz went in for a knock-out. Jack was groggy. The long one sent him right to Jack's jaw. He fell, got up and was sent to earth again by that right. Then Fitz swung his left and Jack went down again. He got up and again was knocked down. Jack on the jaw and he staggered forward and fell face downward. Again he crawled to his feet Fitz gave him time to get on his feet and then hit him right and left. He fell in his corner and Fitzsimmons thought he had the fight won. He turned and went to his corner. Dempsey got to his feet and was stunned.

Thirteenth and Last Round—It was good day with Dempsey. He started to spar with his man, but he was so tired that he was not in it. Jack McAuliffe walked over and tried to induce Jack to stop. He insisted on fighting, however, and during the argument time was called.
